All Will Have Chance of Hearing Proceedings in Case Against Utah Senator.

hairman of Privileges and Elec tions Committee Receives Permission to Summon Unlimited Number of Witnesses.

Washington, Feb. 6.-Complete investigation of the protests against Reed Smoot retaining his seat in the United States Senate will begin March 1 before the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The committee agreed to this date at a meeting held to-day, and Chairman Burrows was given unlimited power to summon witnesses and to appoint a subcommittee to go to Utah to take testimony if such a course shall be found to be neces sary.

A list of twenty witnesses was submitted by the protestants, and most of these will be here soon after March 1. It was determined that the hearing of the case ENGLISH TRAMP RECORDED shall be public. The protestants, who are now organizing to make the fight agains Senator Smoot, have declared that it i senator Smoot, have declared that it is not their intention to enter into what are known as the Lellich charges.

Former Representative R. W. Taylor has announced that it is in the interest of his client to try the case as respects the relation of the Mormon Church to the United States Government and the intrusion of a great hierarchy into the political affairs of the nation.

The witnesses to be summoned are for cal affairs of the nation.

The witnesses to be summoned are for the most part members of the Mormon Church. Among them are children alleged to be the offspring of polygamous marriages contracted since the manifesto of 1890.

It is not decided whether such witnesses will be permitted by the committee to give testimony, as each question of the admissibility of testimony will be decided as it is reached in the hearings.

A MURDER IN HIS DIARY.

ignbond. Who Slew Aged Woma in Kidderminster, Is identified by His Own Handwriting.

London, Feb. 6.-That it is another of those stories from real life that would be dismissed as incredible if used in a novelist's plot is all one can say of the tale that has just come from Lincoln of a tramp who killed a woman, recorded the fact in his diary, and has just fallen into the hands of justice through the grewsome entry being discovered.

The murder with which this tramp now stands charged was committed in the hop fields near Kidderminster, nearly three months ago, under particularly revolting circumstances. Mary Swinburne, the victim, was 63 years old. One Saturday afternoon she was seen with a stranger. The next morning a cowkeeper found her body by the roadside. The murderer had slashed the body until it was almost unrecognizable, and then departed, leaving his large heavy knife by her side.

The affair made a great sensation, but not the faintest clew to the slayer could be uncovered. What mystified the authorities more than anything else was the apparent lack of motive, for so far as they could discover the woman was on unriendly terms with no one and her financial position would not attract even the meanest robber.

A few days ago the jail at Lincoln, some distance from Kidderminster, admitted a tramp sentenced by the District Magistrate to ten days' detention for vagrancy. While the warder was preparing the bath every prisoner must take on entering the prison, he noticed the tramp take from his pocket a small notebook, tear a leaf out of it, roll the paper into a ball and put it into his mouth. The officer pretended to take no notice of the prisoner's action, and the tramp, at a moment when he thought the warder's attention diverted, ejected the partly chewed fragments into a dark corner of the room.

When the prisoner had been removed to a cell, the warder gathered up and placed together the tiny bits, and read. 'If murdered her. God help me. Murder will out." On the same page were other references to the Kidderminster crime which convinced the authorities that the murderer they were so anxious to meet had fallen into their hands those stories from real life that would be dismissed as incredible if used in a novel-
